The Forum About South Jersey: Introduction

On December 6, 2016, two Rutgers-Camden scholars (Shauna Shames, Assistant Professor of Political Science, and Spencer Clayton, Ph.D. Candidate in Public Affairs) will release new research entitled Is South Jersey Getting Its 'Fair Share' of Public Goods? This report investigates multiple differences between counties in three New Jersey regions: North, Central, and South. In particular, it seeks to answer the longstanding question of whether state resources are divided in a just way across these regions. Read More

Presentation: American Society of Criminology Conference

On Thursday, November 17th, WRI Senior Project Administrator, Tracy Swan, presented at the 72nd Annual Meeting of the American Society of Criminology. Ms. Swan presented two posters on preventing juvenile delinquency in Cumberland County, New Jersey. Her first poster addressed school personnel's growing reliance on law enforcement for managing classroom behavior and possibilities for reversing the trend, and her second detailed youth recidivism reduction in Cumberland County.
